#1 Conference for Christian Writers!

Stacy Hawkins Adams, an award-winning Christian fiction author, speaker and freelance writer. Her six nationally-published novels weave faith, social issues and personal growth themes into creative plots. Her first nonfiction book (released May 2010), gives women practical tips, scriptural guidance and inspiration on how to connect deeply with God. Stacy's novel, The Someday List, has maintained a steady presence on Essence bestseller's list and soared to #7 on the Kindle bestseller list.

The Someday List has been nominated for a Library of Virginia fiction award. Her latest novel Dreams That Won't Let Go, hit bookstore shelves in mid-January and continues to receive critical acclaim. Her first nonfiction book, Who Speaks to Your Heart? Tuning in to God's Whispers, released in May 2010, and is designed to serve as a guide for busy women from all walks of life who long to connect with God.

Before becoming a full-time author and freelance writer, Stacy served as a newspaper reporter and columnist for thirteen years, primarily at the Richmond Times-Dispatch. She currently writes a freelance parenting column for the Times-Dispatch and a faith-based column for an online teen girls' magazine, www.SusieMag.com. Other freelance clients have included Gospel Today and Heart & Soul magazines, AARP's Bulletin and Crosswalk.com.

Stacy is a member of the Advanced Writers and Speakers Association, and served as the founding president of the Richmond Chapter of the American Christian Fiction Writers. She recently launched a group coaching service called Author In You (www.AuthorInYou.com), through which she provides personalized motivation and advice to fiction and nonfiction writers seeking to complete a manuscript.

When she is not writing or speaking, she devotes considerable time to promoting child advocacy issues as a nonprofit marketing consultant. Stacy lives in a suburb of Richmond, Va. with her husband and two children.
